Vincent AI

A detailed overview of the award-winning technology available from vLex to enhance your legal research.

Human search at machine speed

By combining human search behaviour with machine speed, Vincent enables you to go beyond traditional research methods. With its easy-to-use technology, this cross-jurisdictional assistant helps you to:

- Quickly interact with global legal information
- Save valuable research time
- Extract key legal issues from cases
- Access automatically generated headnotes on millions of cases
- Improve the quality of your work by ensuring no important documents are missed due to human error.

Importantly, Vincent recognises legal documents from over 30 countries, in both English and Spanish. As well as finding all in-text references, Vincent also finds documents that are semantically similar, on the same points of law, and also in other jurisdictions, to help lawyers build better arguments using on-point cases and persuasive authorities.

Go beyond public resources. Built on top of the Iceberg AI platform, Vincent can also locate relevant materials in your private collection.

Vincent AI Case Analysis

vLex has enhanced Vincent AI's capabilities to include a new feature called Case Analysis. Vincent, using large-scale language models, can now read cases, extract key information, and automatically produce summarised headnotes - helping legal professionals understand the important issues addressed in a judgment at a glance.

Extract key legal issues

Vincent AI will read and extract the key legal issues from a judgment to provide you with an understanding of the issues addressed within the case.

Headnotes and summaries

With only around 20% of cases being reported in many regions around the world, Vincent AI can help you navigate to the right case by providing automatically generated headnotes to help you understand the case without needing to read the full judgment.

Importantly, Vincent can help with legal research, but you should always console and confirm any details within the source material before relying on it.

The screenshot displays the vLex Justis web application interface. At the top, the vLex Justis logo is visible on the left, and a search bar is on the right. Below the logo, a sidebar contains various navigation icons. The main content area is titled 'Case History: Confirms [2005] EWCA Civ 857'. The 'Case Analysis' section is prominently displayed, featuring a 'Free Preview' button and a 'Powered by Vincent AI' badge. The 'Legal issue' section states: 'What is the framework for determining the property rights of cohabiting couples in relation to beneficial ownership of a house after the breakdown of their relationship?'. The 'Headnote' section provides a summary of the case, mentioning 'PROPERTY LAW. COHABITATION. The case concerns the property rights of a cohabiting couple after the breakdown of their relationship. The House of Lords discusses the correct framework for determining the beneficial ownership of their jointly owned property, based on sole or joint ownership, and the burden of proof for showing a different division of the interests. The court also addresses the issue of compensation for a party who is excluded from the home, where the home is jointly owned by the parties but there is no longer an intention or expectation of cohabitation.' The 'Key Paragraphs' section includes a quote from the judgment: '[69] "In law, "context is everything" and the domestic context is very different from the commercial world. Many more factors than financial contributions may be relevant to divining the parties' true intentions. These include: any advice or discussions at the time of the transfer which cast light upon their intentions then; the reasons why the home was acquired in their joint names; the reasons why (if it be the case) the survivor was authorised to give a receipt for the capital moneys; the purpose for which the home was acquired; the nature of the parties' relationship; whether they had children for whom they both had responsibility to provide a home; how the purchase was financed, both initially and subsequently; how the parties arranged their finances, whether separately or together or a bit of both; how they discharged the outgoings on the property and their other household expenses...."'. The 'Categories' section at the bottom lists 'property and conveyancing', 'trust', and 'cohabitation', with a 'Show all' link.

Easy to use

Vincent's intuitive drag-and-drop interface enables you to upload a relevant document, whether it's a case, a skeleton argument, or any other legal document. You can also type or copy and paste relevant information into the text box as a starting point, to see where Vincent takes you.

An advantageous start

Vincent reads lengthy documents in seconds to find citations and party names. It can also identify key phrases, understand the content and find semantically similar documents. Vincent will return a unique set of highly relevant search results in a matter of seconds, which would have taken hours to compile manually.

The real power of this tool comes from its integration with vLex's extensive collection of legal information. This provides an advantageous starting point for any research, and ensures that millions of documents are being considered each and every time Vincent is used.

The screenshot displays the Vincent AI interface within the vLex platform. The top navigation bar includes the vLex logo, a search bar, and a user profile icon. The main header shows the search query 'A resulting, implied...' and the number of results, '1,065 results'. The interface is divided into several sections:

- Left Sidebar: Contains a search bar and a list of filters including 'All Content' (1,065), 'Legislation and Regulations' (10), 'Case Law' (990), 'Administrative Materials' (1), 'Books and Journals' (37), 'Blogs' (26), 'Forms and Contracts' (1), 'News' (0), 'Dockets' (0), and 'Official Journals' (0). Below this is a section for 'Your Documents' with a 'CONNECT' button and a list of countries/regions: 'All Countries & International' (1,149), 'Australia' (110), 'Australia Federal only', 'Australian Capital Territory', 'New South Wales', 'Northern Territory', 'Victoria', and 'South Australia'.
- Main Content Area: Displays search results under the heading 'A resulting, implied...'. It includes a 'Search in results' bar and a list of documents. The first document is 'Gissing v Gissing' (1970) UKHL J0707-1, [1971] AC 886, [1970] 3 WLR 255. The second document is 'Reverses [1969] EWCA Civ J0401-6'. The third document is 'Ayerst v C. & K. (Construction) Ltd' (1975) UKHL J0521-1, [1976] AC 167, [1975] 3 WLR 16. The fourth document is 'Commissioners of Inland Revenue v Plummer' (1995) 13 TCR 1.
- Right Sidebar: Contains a section titled 'This is the list of results connected to your document through the topics and citations Vincent found.' Below this is a button labeled 'Direct Vincent'.

What makes Vincent different?

Aside from the intuitive drag-and-drop interface, what sets Vincent apart from similar tools is the vast amount of content it uses to glean results. Unlike other services, Vincent searches one of the largest collections of legal information in the world, as well as indexed content from over 100 external publishers.

This helps to reduce the risk of missing important cases, whether they are from vLex or other providers; making Vincent neutral in its approach. Vincent does not rank information based on provider, but simply by relevance to your document and search query.

Additionally, Vincent can help you find important information within a case and provide a header note for unreported judgments, saving you time and improving your ability to navigate case law to find the right cases for your clients.

Mitigate your risk

Vincent reduces your risk of missing important information or relying on documents that are no longer current, as the vLex database is updated daily.

Improve your productivity

Collate a set of highly relevant search results using Vincent, which would have otherwise taken hours to compile.

Build a better argument

Vincent does more than simply find documents, it delivers the insight you need to support your case.
